B2 (Test version and question number) - The early school of psychology known as functionalism was developed by (The question you got wrong)

- A) Wilhelm Wundt (Wrong answer that you picked)
- B) William James (Right answer)

p. 4 (Page or pages on which you found the supporting quote) - “Unlike those hoping to assemble the structure of the mind from simple elements - which was rather like trying to understand a car by examining its disconnected parts - philosopher-psychologist William James thought it more fruitful to consider the evolved functions of our thoughts and feelings.” (Quote that explains why the right answer is indeed right)
